

Conference

ROYAL
PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY

Blue pill, pink pill? Does gender matter?

Royal Pharmaceutical Society, London
Thursday 10 November 2011

The conference will examine the extent to which gender should be a factor in the development, regulation and use of medicines and discuss gender considerations in clinical practice.

Objectives of the event

- To increase awareness of the relevance of gender differences when caring for patients and the wider medical and pharmacy professional community
- To enter a dialogue with the pharmaceutical industry and the MHRA/European regulatory authorities on the reporting of analyses by gender in the public domain
- Consider the role of drug development clinical trials and post marketing trials or data collection in identifying clinically relevant gender differences

Learning points for delegates

- Summarise the effects of gender in the diagnosis and treatment of cardiovascular and other diseases
- Describe ways in which gender may affect drug treatment and patient care
- Identify ways in which knowledge and information dissemination on the effects of gender in clinical and pharmacy practice can be improved.

Who should attend?

Women doctors, juniors and consultants involved in therapeutic prescribing and those involved in research. Pharmacists practising in all areas of the profession, anyone working in clinical research in the pharmaceutical industry, hospitals, and academia, healthcare policy makers, regulators, anyone interested in the development of personalised medicine.
